Washington D. C.

Dear General Smith:

Some time ago, someone told me that once upon a time you attended Grade School No. 10 in Indianapolis on the corner of Ashland Avenue.

The writer was an alumnus of that school, having lived at 916, or 1015, or somewhere along there on College Avenue, and his memories of that period recall an old medical school across the street to the north of No. 10.

During the period when I was a student, the medical school was being dismantled and we youngsters used to sneak away to examine the abandoned exhibit against the wishes of Miss Whitsett, Miss Randall, and the principal, Miss Kay.

I wonder, General, if any of these recollections ring a bell anywhere and if you remember or recall this period.

Sincerely yours,

Arthur D. Jenkins
